

The Department of Defense Insider Threat Program

The Department of Defense (DoD) Insider Threat Program leads DoD efforts to prevent, deter, detect, and mitigate insider threats to the DoD enterprise.

Located within the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence and Security, Counterintelligence, Law Enforcement, and Security (OUSDI&S), (CLS), the program provides governance and advocacy for insider threat programs across the DoD Components and Services supporting nearly 15 million personnel.

The program is dedicated to the pursuit of advanced capabilities integrated within DoD security reform and vetting efforts, and to the development of a well-equipped, trained, and vigilant workforce to protect DoD resources, personnel, installations, and other equities from insider threats.

The DoD Insider Threat Program provides strategic oversight, issues policy and implementation guidance, and advocates for resources for the DoD Insider Threat community.

The office has played a critical role in advancing the mission through targeted investments in training and workforce professionalization and in advanced social and behavioral science research. The program also facilitates information sharing, collaboration, and continuous improvement of the insider threat discipline for stakeholders across the U.S. government and key partners in critical infrastructure.
